WELCOME MESSAGE

On behalf of the University College of the North, I enthusiastically welcome you to Linkages in Northern Economic Development. The theme of this year's conference is about renewal and a new vision; about developing and growing our networks and our partnerships, and it's about ideas and innovation. Most importantly, it's about linking all those with a stake in a prosperous and progressive northern Manitoba in a discussion about our common goals and ideas.

UCN is proud to partner with the Manitoba Chambers of Commerce and Look North in facilitating this conference on northern economic development. Our intent is to create a forum for engaging northern people in an ongoing conversation about the future of northern Manitoba.

Your attendance is important and valued.

Thanks for being here.

Doug Lauvstad, President and Vice Chancellor, University College of the North

Look North Reception & Dinner

The Look North Dinner is proudly brought to you by the University College of the North Culinary Arts Students. The students of this program will prepare a true northern dining experience for the guests of the Linkages Conference and we hope you all enjoy!

The Culinary Arts Program is a 40-week program designed to provide students with the knowledge and skills in Culinary Arts and prepare the students for employment in this field. The students during their courses work and prepare food for the UCN cafeteria. Each course within the program will have curriculum related to occupational safety and health, and both theory and practical components of the program will be emphasize knowledge and practices for a safe workplace. Students exit the course with a Culinary Arts Certificate and a first year apprenticeship if 70% is attained in all courses.

Thank you to our wine sponsor the H5 Group of Companies.

JOEL SEMENIUK

Founder and CEO, HORIZONthree

I accelerate business modernization. That's a lot of syllables for "I make change happen faster". It's what I do. I love talking about it, teaching it, and helping startups and businesses unlock their potential.

Since 1995, I've been examining and creating the methods, processes, and best practices for business innovation and have applied it to businesses of all sizes – from startups to mega-corporations. But even that's too slow. I want to influence change on a massive scale and create a tipping point for the future of work, which I believe is upon us all.

So I founded HORIZONthree. We're tackling the future of work from all angles – education, policy, and business. We take a top down and bottom up approach that gets businesses, educators, and policymakers thinking like investors and working like startups.

By creating programming that's accessible and scalable, we are democratizing innovation. HORIZONthree is so much more than an innovation accelerator. We are here to help take our customers from the foothills to the summit, and all the stops along the way. From ideation to validation, to commercialization and on to market expansion into Canada, Asia, and Europe, our only goal is to get you there so you can make a difference and earn your degree in Disruptology along the way.

NATHAN SNIDER
